Aim and objectives

The collection of scientific articles covers topical issues in the history of Ukraine, world history, historiography and source studies. Preference is given to the materials prepared on the edges of historical science with political science, sociology, psychology and other related sciences.

Review process

Reviewing is to check the correspondence of the article title to the problems of the collection and the content. The review also determines the relevance of the topic, its novelty and the validity of the conclusions. The editorial board uses blind peer review, which means that both the reviewer and author identities are concealed.

Open Access Policy

The Editorial Board practices the policy of open access to the published material, upholds the principles of scientific integrity and the free dissemination of scientific information and knowledge sharing.

Ethical policy

The editorial policy is based on the unconditional adherence to the ethical standards professed by the international scientific community. The editorial board relies on the recommendations of the Ethics Committee (Committee on Publication Ethics – <http://publicationethics.org>). The articles that have not been previously published are accepted for consideration. If an article was previously published, the editorial board should be provided reasons for its re-publication. An article can only be published after the final consent of its author and all co-authors.
